President's Report

Remembering the El Faro Crew

There is nothing easy about this month's message, but right off the bat, I want everyone to know that it's much, much more than simply a traditional phrase when I state that the SIU will never forget the men and women who were lost on the El Faro's final voyage. We are building a memorial honoring all 33 of our brothers and sisters, and we will conduct a ceremony every year. It's a tragic part of our union's history, but it is a chapter that must be remembered.

Michael Sacco

I know that in modern times, news cycles tend to "move on" quickly. Attention spans are short, too, in this age of smart phones, constant connectivity and what has been described as overstimulation. For us, none of that matters when it comes to the mariners on the El Faro. They will remain in our hearts and on our minds.

As the tragedy unfolded, I knew my place was to be in Jacksonville with the families and our members. At our union hall, we also welcomed brothers and sisters from our affiliated American Maritime Officers, families of the Polish nationals who'd been aboard the El Faro, and executives from the company that owned and operated the vessel. I think we all needed to be together, grieving with one another and supporting each other.

It goes without saying, but the loss of 33 lives is devastating for all of us. In our line of work, this is our worst nightmare.

To the families, I want you to know that I personally understand the pain of losing a child, a sibling, a parent. I've lived through all of those terrible moments over the years. My hope is that the support of loved ones and friends, along with your faith, will help ease your burden enough to get through the months ahead. Obviously, financial support won't ease the emotional pain, but I also hope that our Seafarers El Faro Assistance Fund – quickly established last month to help the families – will at least eliminate some of the monetary worries.

We all know that the maritime industry can be dangerous. It goes with the territory.

And unfortunately, this wasn't the first time SIU members have lost their lives in the line of duty. Going all the way back to World War II, the hazards of the job have caught up with us at different times and in different ways, whether through enemy attack or severe weather or equipment malfunctions or some other mishap.

Sometimes we don't ever find out what went wrong. That was the case the last time an SIU-crewed ship was lost with all hands: the SS Poet back in 1980.

But again, that doesn't make losing the El Faro's crew any easier. We're all grieving together and we're all hurting.

Something else we have in common is that we all want answers, but that's going to require patience. And the truth is there are parts of this equation we may never know.

Lastly, I debated whether to even bring this up, but there are some vultures who have tried to turn this tragedy into a referendum on the Jones Act. In my opinion they are dishonoring those who lost their lives on the El Faro. Actually, that's the polite version. What I really think of those cold, calculating opportunists isn't suitable for print.

I'm not going to let them politicize the passing of our members. They think we're weak right now and they don't care about their timing. But it is precisely in the names of the El Faro crew that I'm doubling down on my efforts and our union's efforts to preserve the Jones Act, maintain American-flag shipping and boost the U.S. Merchant Marine. We will fight on in their honor.

We will remember them in other ways, too, but we owe it to those brothers and sisters to do everything possible to make sure their chosen industry remains intact.

Within our industry we have plenty of disagreements, but ultimately we are all part of the U.S. Merchant Marine. In a very real sense, we are one family, one crew.

May God bless all those who perished on the El Faro.

These mariners from the SIU-crewed USNS Stockham were among the first to donate to the Seafarers El Faro Assistance Fund.

Seafarers El Faro Assistance Fund Launched

SIU Secretary-Treasurer David Heindel on Oct. 9 announced the launch of a voluntary fund constructed to help dependents of the Seafarers who perished in the tragic sinking of the vessel El Faro.

Contributions to the Seafarers El Faro Assistance Fund may be made by visiting the home page of the SIU website – www.seafarers.org – and clicking on the "Donate" button. The union has applied for tax-exempt status (meaning contributions would be tax-deductible) and will confirm that status once it's official.

If donating by check, please make it out to Seafarers El Faro Assistance Fund and mail to:

Seafarers El Faro Assistance Fund
C/o SIU Secretary-Treasurer
5201 Auth Way
Camp Springs, MD 20746

The fund's purpose is to help meet some of the unanticipated financial hardships faced by the families. Virtually any individual or organization may donate. One-hundred percent of the donations will go towards grants for the families.

In order to be a beneficiary of the fund, an individual must have been a dependent of a crew member. Applications will be available at SIU headquarters and the union hall in Jacksonville, Florida.

The union also plans to place a memorial lighthouse at or near the hall that will include the names of all who perished. Most of the Seafarers on the El Faro's last voyage were from the Jacksonville area; the name El Faro means lighthouse.

All Hands Perish During El Faro Tragedy

The last communication from the SIU-crewed El Faro was calm.

En route from Jacksonville, Florida, to Puerto Rico, the ship had lost power near the Bahamas, had taken on water and was listing 15 degrees. But the situation was described from the vessel as manageable. At least some of the water reportedly had been pumped out.

That transmission around 7:30 a.m. on Oct. 1, along with subsequent initial updates from the U.S. Coast Guard and vessel owner/operator Tote Maritime Puerto Rico led to nervous hopefulness that the El Faro was riding out what had started as a tropical storm.

Despite heroic search efforts from the Coast Guard, Navy, Air Force and others – at one point, U.S. airplanes were losing parts while braving horrendous weather – good news never arrived. The storm that became Hurricane Joaquin lingered longer than forecast, which delayed and complicated the search mission.

The first substantial update happened on Oct. 4: A debris field had been found near the El Faro's last known position. The next morning, a Coast Guard news conference all but confirmed everyone's worst fears. The ship most likely had gone down in a category four hurricane; even if crew members had managed to launch lifeboats, they would have been doing so amidst 50-foot waves, 140-mph winds and in zero visibility.

The search continued until sunset on October 7, and one body was located along with more debris from the ship (which had been carrying hundreds of containers along with roll-on/roll-off cargo), but by then the tragic reality seemed inescapable.

Members of the El Faro's final crew included 17 Seafarers, 11 members of the SIUNA-affiliated American Maritime Officers (AMO), and five Polish nationals.

CONDOLENCES

Editor's note: The outpouring of sympathy in the immediate aftermath of the El Faro tragedy gave a lift to family members and many others who share in the grief. These are some of the messages received by the SIU and posted online. They are meant as a representative sample, as space limitations don't allow for reproduction of all of them. Every single message sent to the union was read, however.

The captain and crew of the El Faro were Americans and Poles, men and women, experienced mariners and young seamen. They were beloved sons and daughters and loving husbands and fathers. They were dedicated engineers, technicians and a cook. And these 33 sailors were united by a bond that has linked our merchant mariners for more than two centuries – a love of the sea. As their ship battled the storm, they were no doubt working as they lived – together, as one crew. This tragedy also reminds us that most of the goods and products we rely on every day still move by sea. As Americans, our economic prosperity and quality of life depend upon men and women who serve aboard ships like the El Faro.

I thank everyone across our government and in the private sector who worked so tirelessly, on the sea and in the air, day after day, in the massive search for survivors. The investigation now underway will have the full support of the U.S. government, because the grieving families of the El Faro deserve answers and because we have to do everything in our power to ensure the safety of our people, including those who work at sea. Today, 28 American families – from Florida to Maine – and five Polish families are heartbroken. May they be comforted, in some small way, in knowing that they have the love and support of their neighbors, the merchant mariner community and the American people. May God bless the men and women of the El Faro. May He comfort their families. And may He watch over and protect all those who serve at sea on behalf of us all.

- Statement from the White House

On behalf of the men and women of the United States Transportation Command, I would like to express our deep and sincere condolences to the families and friends of the El Faro crew. The maritime community has suffered a terrible loss, and the memories of the courage, professionalism, and dedication of the crew will not soon be forgotten.

We wish you and the entire SIU family strength going forward, as you continue to support the domestic and national security needs of this Nation with the highest level of professionalism in some of the most difficult conditions imaginable. Please accept our deepest regards.

- Darren W. McDew, Commander, USTRANSCOM General, USAF

Please accept my sincerest condolences following the loss of your mariners who perished at sea aboard the El Faro. My heart breaks for you, your brothers and sisters of the SIU, and the mariners' families who must go on without their husbands and wives, fathers and mothers, sons and daughters.

This tragic loss sheds greater light on the difficult and dangerous jobs our mariners take on each and every day to transport our goods and products and support our economic well-being at home. I join you and all of the SIU in honoring their sacrifice, mourning their loss, and paying tribute to their lives. My thoughts and prayers are with you all.

- Hillary Rodham Clinton

This shocking sinking draws (attention to) the great demands on seafarers to face the dangers of their profession with courage and determination. The families of the missing seafarers and the communities they come from are in the forefront of our thoughts and prayers and it would be deeply appreciated if this could be passed on to them... We wish to assure you that we watch and wait with you around the world with all of our thoughts, hopes and deep concern and sincere appreciation for you at this terrible time.

- Paddy Crumlin, ITF President

We learned with shock and profound sorrow of the unfortunate and severe incident of El Faro, carrying 33 people on board. I wish to express our heartfelt sympathies to the victims, the missing, their families and the unions who represented the seafarers, who have perished in the severe conditions generated by Hurricane Joaquin.

- Stephen Cotton, ITF General Secretary

Last Thursday was a tragic day for the American maritime community and America. El Faro, an American-flag ship en route to Puerto Rico, was lost in Hurricane Joaquin, and with it, its 33 crew, including 28 Americans. In the hours after we learned that the El Faro was in trouble, the Coast Guard, DOD and other government and private sector partners mobilized assets with search crews battling treacherous weather conditions in an attempt to find survivors, and we appreciate their efforts. Mr. Speaker, today our thoughts and prayers are with the crew members' families and loved ones, and I ask that the House observe a moment of silence to honor the brave men and women who served on the El Faro.

- Rep. Duncan Hunter (R-California), on the floor of the House of Representatives.

My heart and prayers go out to the families of those aboard the cargo ship El Faro.

- Rep. Corrine Brown (D-Florida)

We are deeply saddened by the loss of 28 of our brothers and sisters aboard the cargo ship El Faro. These brave men and women left an incredible mark on their communities, both on land and at sea via their hard work and steadfast commitment to the maritime trade. On behalf of Secretary-Treasurer Elizabeth Shuler, Executive Vice President Tefere Gebre and the twelve and a half million working men and women of the AFL-CIO, we extend our deepest condolences to the families of the lost mariners, their colleagues and their communities.

- Richard Trumka, AFL-CIO President

Words cannot express our deep sorrow on the loss of the El Faro crew. At times like this, we feel just how close a family we all truly are.

- Jim Given, SIU of Canada President

There is no more devoted community of professionals than those who serve in the Nation's Merchant Marine. We share a brotherhood of the sea – a livelihood of inherent danger and rewards. The El Faro tragedy is weighing heavily on MEBA members past and present, and we are sharing the grief of our fellow mariners and their families. The chilling fate of the El Faro and her crew has hit home in the heart of every mariner who understands the unforgiving nature of the sea coupled with merciless weather. We stand shoulder to shoulder with you and all your members during this terrible, trying time.

- Marshall Ainley, President, and Bill Van Loo, Secretary-Treasurer, MEBA

We offer our deepest condolences to the families of El Faro's 33 crew members, and to all those who called these experienced, dedicated mariners friends and co-workers. These were skilled mariners – and union brothers and sisters – who dedicated their careers to moving critical cargo inside our complex system of global commerce.

- Edward Wytkind, President, Transportation Trades Department

On behalf of the membership of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, I extend my deepest condolences to the families of the seafarers who perished aboard the El Faro. My sympathies also go out to the members of the SIU-AGLIW who were friends and shipmates of those lost at sea. The tragedy of El Faro haunts all those who go down to the sea in ships.

- Gunnar Lundeberg, President/Secretary-Treasurer, Sailors' Union of the Pacific

Let us continue to use our collective voice to share with others the importance of the maritime industry and to honor the hard work, skill and sacrifice that mariners offer to all of us. And let us continue to be in prayer for these 33 seafarers and their families left behind.

- Rick Schiappacasse, International President, and R. Andrew Riester, Executive Vice President, International Propeller Club of the United States

On behalf of SMOU, we join Paddy and Steve Cotton to convey our deepest condolences to the families and loved ones of all 33 crew members onboard El Faro. We are saddened and shocked to hear that this had happened. It is unfortunate and deeply regrettable that nature and the harsh sea triumphed over our brothers in this incident. It is also a grim reminder that our seafarers, so often forgotten as the people who move our necessities every single day, are forgotten as mere specks in the vast oceans where they face huge risks Overwhelming support for the families and mariners was expressed through the union's social media sites. This image of students from the University of Southern Maine proved very popular on the SIU and Seafarers LOG Facebook pages.

When 33 perfectly healthy people are taken all at once, while they are just doing their jobs, it stands out and shakes us to the core. As a seafarer, I feel a sense of loss that probably only other seafarers would understand when a tragedy of this magnitude occurs, but this feeling will not even begin to compare with what the families will be going through. It is a brutal reminder of the dangers and perils of our occupation and when something like this occurs; it brings home the very real sense of suffering and loss that families have to endure. My heart, thoughts and sympathies go out to the families, loved ones and members of your union on this tragic occasion.

Moments of Silence, Other Remembrances

At SIU halls, union headquarters and aboard ships, moments of silence were observed Oct. 6-7 in honor of everyone aboard the El Faro. The SIU hall in Jacksonville, Florida – home area for most of the crew – also hosted a memorial service Oct. 8 that was attended by family members, other loved ones and old shipmates.

These two pages feature a sampling of photos from those remembrances and others, including submissions from the SIU of Canada. We shared additional photos on our social media sites and may include more in upcoming issues of the LOG. Though the moments were solemn, there were some smiles, too, as people fondly remembered happier times involving their fallen SIU brothers and sister.

The SIU members were Bosun Roan Lightfoot, ABs Carey Hatch, Jackie Jones, Jack Jackson, Brookie Davis and Frank Hamm, QEE Sylvester Crawford, REI Louis Champa, OMUs Anthony Thomas, German Solar-Cortes and Joe Hargrove, GUDEs Mariette Wright, James Porter and Roosevelt Clark, Steward/Baker Theodore Quammie, Chief Cook Lashawn Rivera and SA Lonnie Jordan.

The AMO members were Capt. Michael Davidson, Chief Mate Steven Shultz, Second Mate Danielle Randolph, Third Mate Jeremie Riehm, Chief Engineer Jeffrey Mathias, Chief Engineer Richard Pusatere, First Assistant Engineer Keith Griffin, Second Assistant Engineer Howard Schoenly, Third Assistant Engineer Michael Holland, Third Assistant Engineer Mitchell Kuflik and Third Assistant Engineer Dylan Meklin.

The Polish riding gang consisted of Piotr Krause, Marcin Nita, Jan Podgorski, Andrzej Truskowski and Rafal Zdobych.

When the Coast Guard announced the search was ending, SIU President Michael Sacco stated, "Although we tried to maintain hope, we were afraid this moment would come. It is difficult to describe the profound grief we are sharing throughout our organization and with the crew members' families.

"Words also cannot adequately express our gratitude for everyone involved in the search efforts," he continued. "To the men and women of the Coast Guard, Navy and Air Force, we thank you and we salute you. We also deeply appreciate the efforts of Crowley Maritime and everyone else who pitched in. We know the effort was extraordinary and not without risk.

"We will never forget the men and women from the El Faro's final voyage."

AMO National President Paul Doell stated, "There are no words for our sadness and grief as we make the agonizing transition from hope and anticipation to sorrow and loss and all that comes with them. Our deepest sympathy and our prayers are with the families and loved ones of our brothers and sisters as we muster our resources to support them in whatever ways we can."

The last time all hands were lost on an SIU-crewed ship was Oct. 24, 1980, when the SS Poet went down without a trace in the Atlantic. There were 34 mariners aboard: 24 Seafarers and 10 officers.

The El Faro tragedy also evoked memories of the 1983 sinking of the National Maritime Union vessel Marine Electric, which claimed the lives of 31 of its 34 mariners. It sank in frigid waters off the coast of Virginia on Feb. 12.

Union Hall Became Beacon

Most of the SIU crew from the El Faro lived in the Jacksonville area, and the SIU hall there immediately became the gathering place for family members, concerned fellow Seafarers, company officials, Coast Guard officers and others. Regularly scheduled informational meetings took place each day (including by phone for those family members who weren't at the hall), as did a prayer vigil and, eventually, a memorial service.

As soon as the Coast Guard announced the grim outlook on October 5, SIU President Sacco and Executive Vice President Augie Tellez arranged to be in Jacksonville the following morning. They spent the week there, grieving with and supporting loved ones. They also met with mariners and company officials aboard the El Faro's sister ship, the El Yunque. Meanwhile, SIU Secretary-Treasurer David Heindel spearheaded the formation of the Seafarers El Faro Assistance Fund, created to assist family members of the crew (see page 2).

Tellez noted the bitter irony that an industry so often overlooked suddenly found itself in the headlines day after day as the saga unfolded.

"Unfortunately, it takes a tragedy like this one to focus America's attention on what our people do, day in and day out, to keep the commerce of our country going and to help maintain national security," Tellez stated. "Occasionally we are reminded of the dangers they face, whether they involve pirate attacks, enemy missiles or the mighty forces of nature. Mariners provide a critical service for everyone ashore, and they continue returning to sea even after tragic losses. God bless all our Seafarers wherever they may be."

Heindel stated, "The loss of our brothers and sisters is a grim reminder of what life at sea can bring. It may include many mistresses, but the one uncertain, unpredictable and unforgiving mistress is the sea herself. While we respect her power, she is slow at recognizing our efforts and aptitudes, because no matter how well-trained we may be, the sea and her power are incomprehensible and unmatched.

"We have received many letters and messages of support from unions and friends from around the world," Heindel continued. "I would like to express our sincere thanks on behalf of the families and our organization. We are touched and thankful knowing we are not alone in the loss of our colleagues."

Indeed, the outpouring of sympathies was perhaps unprecedented for the union, which reflected both the sincerity of the messages and the prevalence and ease of electronic communications. The SIU's social media sites were particular hotbeds of activity; most of the messages were in unity and sympathy, while others were personal remembrances of the individual crew members.

Still others were packed with understandable frustration and heartbreak as the maritime community tried to make sense of the tragedy.

QMED Samir Tarsha was one of hundreds if not thousands of members who weighed in.

"As a member of the same union, who ships out of the same union hall where the El Faro is crewed, I easily could've been on there," he noted. "I'm on a ship now and during a drill yesterday we had a moment of silence for the crew and all of the families involved in the El Faro tragedy. It was hard holding tears back. To the crew of the El Faro, you will never be forgotten. Your memory lives on through us, your seafaring brothers and sisters. And to the families involved, I send my deepest condolences and prayers. Fair winds and following seas my fellow Seafarers."

Recertified Steward Steve Dickson, also posting from aboard a ship, expressed his sympathy and called for unity.

"The eyes of America are upon the U.S. Merchant Marine," he observed. "We must stand strong and not let feuding and bitterness rear their ugly heads in this time of sorrow. No American-flagged ship has been taken down by the sea in many years. On average, 127 vessels are lost each year worldwide. This has gone on for centuries, since travel and commerce upon the water began. The sea is a harsh mistress and mariners must never take her for granted. We must pull together to lift each other, not tear each other and our industry down. May those who were lost aboard El Faro rest in peace. You will not be forgotten, and we should pray for the safe return from every voyage of all those who go to sea."

Retired Recertified Bosun Al Calder, who sailed from 1967 to 2010 and who served as a patrolman in Jacksonville in the late 1980s, similarly conveyed his sadness while also offering broader perspective.

"So many of us old-timers grew up in SIU," Calder said. "We have all made sacrifices and found ourselves in dangerous situations on one vessel or another. Many of us have lost shipmates or seen our brothers' ashes spread upon the ships' wake over the waters that they loved and respected.... Appreciate and respect the joys and dangers of our way of life. Thank you my God for every SIU brother that I have ever sailed with and forgive me for the times that I did not appreciate them enough.... My wife and I will now bend our heads in prayer for those brothers and sisters who gave their all for the career they loved."

Investigation Begins

The National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) quickly began its investigation of the sinking, and said the research probably would take one year to 18 months. The report itself will be written afterward. The Coast Guard also will investigate.

At press time, a U.S. Military Sealift Command vessel was mobilizing to serve as a base for a U.S. salvage company. It is estimated that the El Faro sank in 15,000 feet of water, but government officials seemed optimistic about recovering a data recorder from the ship.

Predictably, the sinking isn't without controversy. Critics said the 790-foot ship was too old (it was built in 1975) and that the vessel master should have chosen a different route. Some stooped so low as to attempt to turn the tragedy into a referendum on the Jones Act, sparking incredulity in the domestic maritime industry.

But Tote and many others pointed out the El Faro had passed all of its inspections, and that Davidson was the most experienced captain in the company's fleet. Tote executives said he had a "sound plan" to skirt the storm, and according to at least one published report, the vessel had diverted by 100 miles from its usual course.

Not all of the facts are known – some may never come to light – but as one editorial put it, the storm strengthened sooner than expected, and the ship lost power at the absolute worst possible time.

Tote President and CEO Anthony Chiarello said, "We appreciate there are many rumors and speculations surrounding this tragic event, as there are with any accident. For the sake of the families and loved ones, we ask that you continue to respect their privacy and wait for the investigation results. We at Tote can never truly know the pain the families and loved ones have gone through, but we do know how deeply this event has affected every employee of Tote. A company is made up of people, and this tragedy has touched every individual across our organization."

Search Mission

The breadth of the seven-day search mission was tremendous. Coast Guard, Navy, Air Force, Air National Guard and ship and tugboat crews searched more than 183,000 square nautical miles off the Bahamian coast in a joint effort to locate the El Faro crew. The total area searched is the equivalent of several states.

Rear Adm. Scott Buschman, commander, Coast Guard 7th District, said, "U.S. Coast Guard, U.S. Navy, U.S. Air Force, and the Tote Maritime tug crews searched day and night, sometimes in perilous conditions with the hope of finding survivors in this tragic loss."

SIU members from Crowley and Tote assisted in the search. The Coast Guard also furnished this list of resources that were deployed:

- Coast Guard Air Station Clearwater, Florida HC-130 Hercules airplane crews
- Coast Guard Air Station Clearwater, Florida MH-60 Jayhawk helicopter crews
- Coast Guard Air Station Elizabeth City, North Carolina HC-130 Hercules airplane crews
- Coast Guard Cutter Northland, a 270-foot medium endurance cutter homeported in Portsmouth, Virginia
- Coast Guard Cutter Resolute a 210-foot medium endurance cutter, homeported in St. Petersburg, Florida
- Coast Guard Cutter Charles Sexton, homeported in Key West, Florida
- Air Force Rescue Coordination Center
- Air National Guard HC-130 airplane crews from the 106th Rescue Wing, Westhampton Beach, New York
- Air Force WC-130 Super Hercules crews from the 53rd Weather Reconnaissance Squadron, 403rd Wing, Keesler Air Force Base, Mississippi
- Navy P-8 Poseidon airplane crews from Naval Air Station Jacksonville
- Air Force E-8C Joint Stars crews from the 116th Air Control Wing, Robins Air Force Base, Georgia.

Aker Delivers New SIU-Crewed Tanker

Keel Laid for Fourth Jones Act Vessel Being Built for Crowley

New jobs for Seafarers have been delivered and more are on the way, thanks to a four-ship program involving Aker Philadelphia Shipyard and Crowley Maritime Corp.

The Seafarers-contracted tanker Ohio – the first vessel in the new-build program – was delivered to Crowley in late September. Earlier in the month, the keel was laid for the fourth tanker.

In a news release, Crowley described the Ohio's delivery as “momentous not only for Crowley, but also for the industry because it signifies the first time a product tanker has been constructed with consideration for the future use of LNG for propulsion. The remaining three product tankers being built by [Aker Philadelphia] for Crowley are currently under construction and have planned deliveries through 2016.”

“We are excited to offer our customers cutting-edge technology available in these new tankers, which not only embraces operational excellence and top safety, but also offers the potential to be powered by environmentally friendly LNG in the future,” said Crowley’s Rob Grune, senior vice president and general manager, petroleum and chemical transportation. “Adding these new Jones Act tankers to our fleet allows us to continue providing our customers with diverse and modern equipment to transport their petroleum and chemical products in a safe and reliable manner.”

The new 50,000 dwt product tankers are based on a proven Hyundai Mipo Dockyards (HMD) design which incorporates numerous fuel efficiency features, flexible cargo capability, and the latest regulatory requirements. The Ohio is 600 feet long and is capable of carrying crude oil or refined petroleum products; the same will be true of its sister ship.

Meanwhile, the shipyard (a union facility) hosted the keel-laying ceremony a week and a half before the Ohio's delivery. Keeping with long-held shipbuilding tradition, coins were placed on one of the keel blocks before the unit was lowered into place in the dry dock.

Representatives from the yard and Crowley were in attendance to place the coins and sign the keel block as a gesture of good fortune and safe travels. On behalf of Aker Philadelphia Shipyard, upcoming graduates of the shipyard’s apprenticeship program placed the ceremonial coins. Initiated in 2004, the three-year apprenticeship program develops the next generation of Aker Philadelphia Shipyard employees. The upcoming graduation class will add 24 skilled shipbuilders to the workforce, bringing the shipyard’s apprentices to about 10 percent of its current workforce.

Since the program’s inception, 17 apprentices have moved into management positions and many have obtained additional manufacturing qualifications. The shipyard plans to hire 50 additional apprentices in 2016.

Aker Philadelphia has delivered 20 ships (most of them SIU-crewed) in its 15-year history.

SIU Jobs Secure; Crowley To Operate 5 MSC Ships

The SIU retained all of the unlicensed jobs aboard five U.S. Military Sealift Command (MSC) vessels that recently were awarded to Seafarers-contracted Crowley Maritime Corp. Those vessels – which began crew turnover Oct. 1 – are the USNS 1st LT Harry L. Martin, USNS LCPL Roy M. Wheat, USNS SGT Matej Kocak, USNS PFC Eugene A. Obregon and USNS MAJ Stephen W. Pless.

The operating agreement for the five ships (each of which can carry containers as well as roll-on/roll-off cargo) is for one year and includes four additional, one-year options. Seafarers already had been working aboard those vessels, which previously had been operated by other SIU-contracted companies.

“We never take it for granted when operating agreements from the military go to SIU-contracted companies,” said SIU Vice President Contracts George Tricker. “SIU members have always done top-notch work aboard these vessels, and I’m confident they’ll uphold that tradition in the years ahead.”

According to Crowley, two of the ships will remain berthed in Jacksonville, Florida, and three will be homeported in Norfolk, Virginia – all within the service area of Crowley’s local offices. The vessels will be used to transport cargo throughout the world in support of the U.S. military.

“Crowley is proud to have been selected to provide technical management for this government fleet,” said Crowley’s Paul Varghese, general manager, government services. “This contract is a perfect fit for us, and would not be possible without the hard work and determination of our remarkable government team and the tremendous support we received from MSC.”

Administration Reiterates Its Support for Jones Act

During a recent conference in New York, U.S. Maritime Administrator Chip Jaenichen reaffirmed the overwhelming support for the Jones Act in Congress and the Obama Administration.

In his address at the event in early October, Jaenichen pointed out that for almost a century, presidents from both parties have supported the Jones Act including Barack Obama, George W. Bush, Bill Clinton and Ronald Reagan.

“We have four presidents from both political parties over a three-decade span backing and reinforcing their support of the Jones Act. I ask you, what other kind of issues would trigger that level of political census?” said Jaenichen.

He added that the nation’s freight cabotage law is subject to many “tall tales, embellishments and outright falsehoods or misrepresentations,” such as Puerto Rico’s attempt to blame the Jones Act for its financial woes.

“The unvarnished truth is that Puerto Rico has built a mutually beneficial relationship with Jones Act carriers,” he said. “The Jones Act [provides] just one quarter of maritime service to the island (based on both tonnage and the number of annual vessel calls) and is in no way, shape or form responsible for Puerto Rico’s economic difficulties.”

He concluded that while these falsehoods “may weaken the popularity of the Jones Act, it will never diminish our federal government’s overall support for the Act.”

Echoing support for the law was Tom Allegretti, chairman of the American Maritime Partnership (AMP). He stated that the strong backing of the Jones Act trade is due to the industry’s longstanding positive impact on national, economic and homeland security. He said any attempt to include an amendment of the Jones Act in pending legislation is a “vote subtractor” that can hurt Congressional progress.

“Some in Puerto Rico have suggested that a Jones Act exemption be included in the legislative package under the erroneous theory that the Jones Act is bad for Puerto Rico,” Allegretti stated. “But here’s the kicker: If Congress did that – include an anti-Jones Act amendment in the package – the chances of the overall package getting enacted into law would diminish. That’s because the presence of an anti-Jones Act amendment would reduce or subtract the number of Members of Congress who would vote for the overall bill. So Puerto Ricans would be undermining – and maybe even sabotaging – their own assistance package by including an anti-Jones Act amendment in it.”

The Jones Act requires that cargo moving between domestic ports be carried on ships that are crewed, owned, built and flagged American. It helps maintain nearly 500,000 American jobs and pumps billions of dollars into the economy each year.

AMP Honors U.S. Rep. Duncan Hunter With 'Champion of Maritime' Award

The American Maritime Partnership (AMP) on Sept. 30 recognized U.S. Rep. Duncan Hunter (R-California) with the coalition's 2015 Champion of Maritime Award, which honored Hunter "for his extraordinary support and dedication to the American maritime industry."

AMP is a highly regarded coalition with affiliates from all segments of the domestic maritime industry, including the SIU.

In announcing the award, the coalition noted, "Rep. Hunter's longstanding support for U.S. maritime is demonstrated through his work as Chairman of the Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Maritime Transportation and as a member of the Seapower Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee. As the first Marine combat veteran of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan elected to U.S. Congress, Rep. Hunter understands the importance that the maritime industry serves in the everyday lives of our civilians and our service men and women."

"The true champions of maritime are the hundreds of thousands of highly skilled service men and women in the American maritime industry who tirelessly work to protect our waterways – such a strength in defense wouldn't be possible without the Jones Act," said Rep. Hunter. "I will continue to vocalize my support for the American maritime industry; one that creates good-paying, family-wage jobs, secures our borders, and fuels our economy."

This past June, Rep. Hunter demonstrated his commitment to the industry when he joined hundreds of veterans and active military personnel at the American Maritime Partnership's Military to Maritime career fair in San Diego, where he met with men and women looking to transfer their specialized skills earned from the military into careers in U.S. maritime. The SIU participated in that event.

"Chairman Hunter has been a tremendously valued champion for the domestic American maritime industry, serving as a leader who truly understands our industry's critical role to the vitality and security of our nation," AMP Chairman Tom Allegretti said. "From his time in the service to his seat as Chairman of the Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Maritime Transportation, Congressman Hunter has witnessed firsthand what it takes to sustain a strong maritime industry and because of his dedication, we are honored to provide him with our highest honor: the Champion of Maritime Award."

The U.S. domestic maritime industry is a pillar of our nation's economic, national, and homeland security. More than 40,000 American vessels built in American shipyards, crewed by American mariners, and owned by American companies, operate in our waters every day, and this commerce sustains nearly 500,000 American jobs, $28.95 billion wages and more than $92.5 billion in annual economic output.

Construction Gets Underway on Two New Aloha Class Containerships for Matson

Seafarers-contracted Matson recently announced the start of production on two new Aloha Class containerships designed specifically for Hawaii service, with greater capacity and state-of-the-art "green ship technology" features. After a small ceremony at Aker Philadelphia Shipyard on Oct. 1, the cutting of steel plates began, initiating the construction work to build both ships.

The SIU represents steward department mariners aboard Matson vessels.

In 2013, Matson signed a contract with Aker Philadelphia to build the two new ships for an aggregate price of $418 million. The vessels are expected to be delivered in the third and fourth quarters of 2018 and will sail in the Jones Act trade.

Matson also announced that the first of the two new ships will be named after the late Senator Daniel K. Inouye, who was a lifelong supporter of the U.S. maritime industry and its role in supporting Hawaii's economy. Senator Inouye also was a cherished friend of the SIU.

The 850-foot long, 3,600 TEU vessels will be Matson's largest ships and the largest Jones Act containerships ever constructed, according to the company. They are designed to operate at speeds greater than 23 knots, helping ensure timely delivery of goods in Hawaii. Though bigger, the ships are also designed to accommodate future needs by being able to navigate safely into some of Hawaii's smaller ports, Matson noted.

The new vessels will incorporate a number of features aimed at protecting the environment, including a more fuel-efficient hull design, dual-fuel engines that can be adapted to use liquefied natural gas (LNG), environmentally safe double-hull fuel tanks and freshwater ballast systems.

"These new ships are the future for Hawaii shipping and will bring a new level of efficiency and effectiveness to our service," said Matt Cox, president and CEO, Matson. "The substantial investment in new technology underscores Matson's long-term commitment to Hawaii and our desire to serve the islands in the best, most environmentally friendly way into the future."

Progress in Bid for New Union Hall in Puerto Rico

During the Oct. 5 membership meeting in Piney Point, Maryland, SIU officials announced that a new building has been located for purchase in Puerto Rico. Should the acquisition effort prove successful, the new property will be future site of the SIU's union hall in the commonwealth. On hand to hear the good news and roar their approval were Seafarers and Puerto Rico native sons (photo above, starting in front) Oiler Oscar Cordero, AB Julio Alvarez, FOWT Kenneth Cabrera, (back row) Engineer Armando Garayua, Oiler Carlos Arzuafa Flores, and Oiler Lazaro Rivera.

USNS Comfort Successfully Concludes Mission

Members of the SIU Government Services Division recently helped successfully wrap up a months-long, multinational mission aboard the hospital ship USNS Comfort.

The Military Sealift Command vessel arrived at its home port of Norfolk, Virginia, in late September after making other domestic port calls to disembark members of the civilian and military crews. More than 1,000 medical professionals, military members and mariners were deployed aboard the Comfort as part of Operation Continuing Promise 2015 (CP-15).

The humanitarian effort, which began in April, offered top-level health care to more than 122,000 patients living in impoverished areas of Barbados, Belize, Colombia, Dominica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Jamaica, Nicaragua, and Panama. In addition, veterinarians on board treated more 7,000 animals, and engineers completed more than 90 community and building site projects.

"This is a pretty amazing mission," said Capt. Ryan Tillotson, U.S. Naval Forces Southern Command. "It gets a lot of local interest. The president of Honduras and the first lady showed up for this, we get ambassadors that show up for this, so I think it points to the importance they place on it as well. Everywhere we go the final thing they say when we leave is when are you coming back."

He added, "We had some Cuban medical doctors that joined us on the mission in Haiti when we were actually out assessing patients as part of this medical stop. That's another thing that this mission does; it doesn't look at borders, it looks at people (and) what do people need."

"The opportunity we shared with the U.S. Embassy, to collaborate and engage with the Cuban medical delegation, allowed us to optimize the care each of us provides to the people of Haiti," said Capt. Christine Sears, commanding officer of the medical treatment facility aboard the Comfort. "In each of our mission stops, it has been our goal to provide the best patient care possible. By participating in these engagements, we are able to further that goal by exchanging best practices and observations."

The final mission stop in Haiti began on Sept. 11, after which the Seafarers-crewed ship made a two-day port visit at Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, before heading to Naval Station Mayport, Florida. From there, Navy families were allowed to board the ship and sail with their loved ones to Norfolk, in what's referred to as a "tiger cruise."

"CP-15 has been an incredible journey in which the entire team put forth a tremendous amount of hard work, coordination and perseverance to provide quality care and services to the people within the region," said Capt. Sam Hancock, CP-15 Mission commander. "We have strengthened partnerships with each of the host nations as well as our colleagues, friends and citizens of Central America, South America and the Caribbean."

SIU-Crewed Philadelphia Express Assists In Rescue of Nine Near Key West, Florida

Seafarers recently helped ensure the safety of nine Cubans who were drifting on a makeshift raft near Key West, Florida.

The SIU-crewed Philadelphia Express was in transit between Houston and Savannah, Georgia, in late September when mariners aboard the Crowley-operated ship spotted a floating object in the distance. The containership moved to intercept the object, which was discovered to be a homemade raft with nine Cubans aboard waving in distress. The eight-foot-long by five-foot-wide raft was constructed from large blocks of plastic foam and was floating very low in the water.

Upon a request from the U.S. Coast Guard, the Philadelphia Express began to circle the craft, both to ascertain the nature of the situation and to protect the raft from other potential vessel traffic. The crew boosted the morale of the Cubans until a Coast Guard response vessel arrived on the scene.

The SIU crew on board the Philadelphia Express included Bosun Jose Jimenea, ABs Michael Brisco, Jorge Gamboa, Rolando Salamat and Washington Williams, QE4 Phillip Niles, QEE David Carter, OS Abedon Lujan, Wiper Gary Timmons, Steward/Baker Kenneth Long, Chief Cook Eduardo Elemento and Steward Israel Coronel.

After the Coast Guard vessel had taken control of the situation, the Philadelphia Express was released from the scene and headed towards its original destination of Savannah.

"The crew members participating in this event acted in a very professional manner and are all pleased to have contributed to this rescue effort," said Captain D.A. Sulin, master of the Philadelphia Express. "The Coast Guard vessel was on scene in a short amount of time and clearly had established procedures in place to affect the rescue."

Safety Directors Converge in Maryland

SIU safety directors from across the country met at the union's headquarters and at the Seafarers-affiliated Paul Hall Center for Maritime Training and Education in late September. They are pictured at the school along with SIU headquarters officials, Paul Hall Center instructors, and executives from SIU-contracted companies. The safety directors tackled numerous topics during a one-week curriculum including the Manila amendments to the STCW convention, new simulators at the school, various aspects of safety training and more.

A Floating Tribute to U.S. Merchant Marine Veterans

John W. Brown Provides Living History of WWII

While the World War II contributions of the U.S. Merchant Marine over the years have been largely unheralded or forgotten, one group of devoted volunteers is doing its utmost to positively alter this landscape and, in the process, afford American Merchant Marine Veterans some measure of the recognition they deserve.

These volunteers, including retired Seafarers, came together in 1978 to form a non-profit organization known as Project Liberty Ship. Collectively, they dedicated themselves to the preservation of the Liberty ship SS John W. Brown as a memorial to the men and women of American industry who built the great Liberty Fleet and to the merchant seamen and Naval Armed Guards who sailed the ships across all the oceans of the world.

The John W. Brown is one of two still-operational Liberty ships and one of three preserved as museum ships. (The SS Jeremiah O'Brien in San Francisco is the other surviving operational Liberty ship. The third Liberty ship, the SS Hellas Victory - formerly the SS Arthur M. Huddell - is preserved as a static museum ship in Piraeus, Greece).

As a Liberty ship, she operated as part of the United States Merchant Marine fleet during World War II. Later, the vessel served as a vocational high school training ship in New York. Now fully preserved, the Brown is both a museum ship and a cruise ship. She is berthed at Clinton Street Pier 1 in Baltimore Harbor in Baltimore, Maryland. The platform was named after the Canadian-born American labor union leader John W. Brown.

In her role as a cruise vessel, the Brown gets underway several times a year for six-hour "Living History Cruises" which are open to the public. These voyages take the ship through Baltimore Harbor, down the Patapsco River, and into the Chesapeake Bay.

Designed to educate the public on the pivotal role merchant mariners played in the allied victory during World War II, each cruise includes tours of the ship, discussions of the role of the U.S. Merchant Marine, Liberty ships, and American women in World War II. Also included are reenactments of the activities of the ship's World War II U.S. Navy Armed Guard, flybys and simulated attacks on the vessel by World War II aircraft, and entertainment by a barbershop quartet, individual singers and comedians. Finally, actors make the rounds imitating such World War II-era figures as President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Andrews Sisters, and Abbott and Costello.

At the end of the 2015 cruising season, the John W. Brown had completed her 101st Living History Cruise and had visited more than 29 ports along the United States East Coast, the Atlantic coast of Canada and in the Great Lakes. She is the largest cruise ship operating under the American flag on the United States East Coast.

Designed as cheaply and quickly built cargo steamers, Liberty ships formed the backbone of a massive seafaring of troops, arms, materiel and ordnance to every theater during World War II. Two-thirds of all the cargo that left the United States during the war was shipped aboard Liberty ships. Two hundred of them (some of them SIU-crewed) were lost during the war, either to enemy action or to a range of maritime mishaps including collisions, groundings and fires. There were so many of them, however, that the enemy could never hope to sink enough Liberty ships to close the sea lanes. Consequently, American supplies still managed to get through.

A Liberty ship could carry almost 9,000 tons of cargo, about the same as 300 railroad boxcars. During World War II, they carried every conceivable cargo - from beans to bullets. Some of the vessels, like the John W. Brown, were also fitted out to carry troops as well as cargo. Around 500 soldiers at a time could be carried aboard this vessel. She saw duty in many Mediterranean ports during invasions and steamed in convoys that were attacked by enemy aircraft and submarines, but she was never seriously damaged by the enemy.

The John W. Brown was launched at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard in Baltimore on September 7, 1942, Labor Day. Altogether, six Liberty ships were launched that day from various shipyards; each of them named after a labor leader.

The Brown is powered by a reciprocating, triple-expansion steam engine, a relic from an earlier day in maritime history. The engine is fed with steam from two oil-fired boilers and drives a single, four-bladed propeller, 18 feet in diameter.

Like many U.S. merchant ships during World War II, the John W. Brown carried defensive weapons. Her armament included a 3-inch/50 caliber gun in the bow; one 5-inch/38 caliber gun and two 3-inch/50 caliber guns in the stern. Additionally, she boasted eight 20mm anti-aircraft guns. Two of these flanked the 3-inch/50 bow gun. Four more 20mm guns were at the corners of the flying bridge, and two 20mm guns were in elevated gun platforms on the port and starboard after deck. Since she carried troops as well as cargo, the Brown had a greater number of guns than her merchant sister ships that carried cargo only. A cargo-carrying Liberty ship would typically have had one 5-inch/38 caliber gun, one 3-inch/50 caliber gun and eight 20mm guns. As with U.S. and other Allied merchant ships, the guns on John W. Brown were manned by the U.S. Navy Armed Guard, a detachment of U.S. Navy personnel assigned to the ship.

The Brown was crewed by about 45 civilian merchant seamen. This number varied slightly from voyage to voyage, depending on the number of troops she carried. The vessel made 13 voyages during World War II. Her maiden voyage was to the Persian Gulf, carrying military equipment for Russia, which could only be supplied from the Persian Gulf or via convoys to Murmansk, the infamous "Murmansk run." Most of the Brown's remaining wartime voyages were to the Mediterranean Sea, including duty during the Anzio landings. She was also a part of the invasion force of southern France during Operation Dragoon in August 1944. Immediately following the war, the Brown carried government cargoes to help rebuild war-torn Europe.

Inquiring Seafarer

This month's question was answered by members attending upgrading courses at the union-affiliated Paul Hall Center.

Question: Should merchant mariners, especially those who serve aboard military support vessels, be given veterans' status when they retire?

Alvin Alcasid
Oiler

I definitely think they should be given veteran status because they do the same things military people do. They work closely with military members, do the same types of jobs, and are under the same type of rules as military members are when they are aboard those types of vessels. I sail out of the port of Wilmington, California, and have been sailing since 2005.

Sheryl Farmer
Chief Steward

I would say yes. Merchant mariners do an awful lot when it comes to moving military cargo all over the United States as well as globally during times of war. As a result they contribute greatly to all war efforts. I hail from the port of Norfolk, Virginia, and have been going to sea for six years.

Oscar Cordero
Oiler

Retired mariners who work aboard government support vessels definitely should be given veteran status when they retire. They do the same types of things for the country as people in uniform so they should be recognized for it. I sail from port of Jersey City, New Jersey, and have been sailing since 2011.

Kyle Silva
AB Tankerman

I have been a union member for five years and sail out of the port of Houston, Texas. I think retiring merchant mariners absolutely should be given veterans status when they retire because they do the same type of work as military members do, especially when a war is on. We go into hot zones just as people in military uniforms do.

Derek Minnix
AB

I sail from the port of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and I think only those mariners who have sailed with the naval reserve or aboard Military Sealift Command vessels should be given veteran status when they retire. I've been sailing since 2011.

Julio Alvarez

I say yes because throughout history, merchant mariners have been involved in every war this country has had. It's mariners who take them (members of the military) most of the supplies they need including weapons and ammunition. We take these things to them when the fighting starts and then we bring it back when the fighting ends. So even though we may not actually fire shots, we provide the materials that are vital to them to achieve their mission.

Pics From The Past

Former Seafarer John Ulstrom submitted these photos along with the following message: November 10, 2015 will be the 40th anniversary of the sinking of the mighty lake boat Edmund Fitzgerald. Having served, briefly, on the vessel I thought it might be appropriate to publish a picture or two.... The deckhand is Leon Weber from Superior, Wisconsin. I took the photo in March 1971, shortly after the shipping season had begun. The ship photo is one I purchased on my first hitch in 1965. The Fitzgerald was my first vessel ever, in August of 1965. When I returned to civilian life after four years in the Navy and a year on the beach, I was sent back to the Fitz. I sailed with the SIU from early 2001 until August 2009, as an AB.

If anyone has a vintage union-related photograph he or she would like to share with other Seafarers LOG readers, please send it to the Seafarers LOG, 5201 Auth Way, Camp Springs, MD 20746. Photographs will be returned, if so requested. High-resolution digital images may be sent to webmaster@seafarers.org

NMC Issues Notices on Mariner Forms, Sea Service

Editor's note: The U.S. Coast Guard's National Maritime Center issued the following two notices on August 3. For more information, visit the NMC website: www.uscg.mil/nmc/

Crediting Sea Service for Engine Ratings Serving On Vessels Authorized a Two-Watch System

The Howard Coble Coast Guard and Maritime Transportation Act of 2014, Section 316, amended 46 U.S.C. 8104(g)(1) to allow coal passers, firemen, oilers, and water tenders serving on certain offshore supply vessels (OSVs), towing vessels, and barges engaged on voyages of less than 600 miles to be divided into at least two watches. Before this amendment, only officers and deck crew members were permitted to be divided into two watches.

Engine ratings (QMED, wipers, and oilers) serving on vessels authorized and practicing a two-watch, 12-hour working day, in accordance with the amended statute, may be given 1-1/2 days of service credit for each day a total of 12 hours is worked. For mariners who applied for an endorsement on or after the effective date of the change to 46 U.S.C. 8104 (December 18, 2014), this credit will be applied retroactively for service obtained after that date. It will also be applied for service prior to December 18, 2014, if the vessel's certificate of inspection permitted a two-watch system and the mariner worked two-watch, 12-hour days.

The National Maritime Center (NMC) will begin applying this sea service credit immediately in accordance with the amended statute. Mariners who applied for an endorsement on or after December 18, 2014, the effective date of the statute, and were not given the credit for the 12-hour day may contact the NMC and request a reconsideration of the computation of sea service credit. Mariners who applied before December 18, 2014, and would like to be re-evaluated for 1-1/2 days of service credit will have to reapply for the endorsement sought.

Implementation of Updated Mariner Credentialing Program Forms

The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) approved the CG-719 series of forms (B, K, K/E, P, S, and C) that will replace the forms displaying a June 30, 2012, expiration date. These forms are used within the Mariner Credentialing Program (MCP) during the application process. The data collected on the updated forms is nearly identical to data collected on the previous forms, with some notable exceptions. The K and K/E forms reflect the introduction of the Medical Certificate. The K also has a significant reduction in the number of conditions to be checked by the medical provider. The C is a new non-mandatory form that standardizes the disclosure of conviction information. Users will note formatting changes that are designed to streamline the burden on the mariner and improve data entry. Updated instructions are provided with each form as well.

The Coast Guard will not stock the CG-719 series of forms in paper format. Beginning October 1, 2015, these forms may be obtained electronically in a fillable PDF format by selecting the forms link on the National Maritime Center (NMC) website. Additional updates to the NMC website will occur as quickly as possible to reflect the new forms.

The Coast Guard encourages providers and applicants to purge the old forms from inventory and to begin using the new forms as soon as possible after October 1, 2015. In order to avoid penalizing mariners who have already completed their forms, the NMC will continue to accept the old forms for a period of time.

Implementation of the new forms will commence on October 1, 2015. With the exception of the K and K/E, the Coast Guard will no longer accept outdated forms after April 1, 2016. For the K and K/E, forms signed by a physician after December 31, 2015, must be the new form version. In accordance with 46CFR10.304(d) the K or K/E must be submitted within 12 months of the date signed by the licensed medical professional, therefore, the Coast Guard will no longer accept outdated K or K/E forms after December 31, 2016.

Mariners and other providers should contact the NMC Contact Center using our chat function, e-mailing IASKNMC@uscg.mil, or calling 1-888-IASKNMC (888-427-5662) with any questions regarding these forms.

SHBP Offers COBRA Continuation Coverage To Union Members

The Seafarers Health and Benefits Plan (SHBP) is notifying you of the right to elect to purchase continuation of health coverage if you lose coverage, or experience a reduction in coverage due to certain qualifying events. This continuation of coverage is known as COBRA.

Generally, if you are the employee, you will be eligible to purchase COBRA coverage for a certain period of time if you lost coverage because you did not have enough days of covered employment (unless the job was lost due to gross misconduct). If you are the family member of a covered employee, you may also elect COBRA for a certain period of time when the employee loses coverage; or if you are going to lose coverage because of a divorce or the death of the employee; or in the case of a child of an employee, the child reaches an age at which the Plan no longer considers him or her to be a "dependent child." In the case of a divorce or the death of an employee, you must notify the Plan within 60 days of the divorce or death in order to be eligible to purchase continuation coverage. If you do not notify the Plan in a timely manner, you may not be eligible to receive further coverage. If you are the spouse or dependent child of an employee, you may also elect COBRA if you experience a reduction in coverage when the employee retires.

When you retire, if you were eligible for benefits from the SHBP at the time of your retirement, you will be eligible to purchase COBRA continuation coverage for yourself and/or your family members, even if you are eligible for retiree health benefits. This will enable you and/or your family to continue to receive the same level of benefits that you had prior to your retirement for a certain period of time. If you meet the eligibility requirements for retiree health benefits, you will begin to receive those benefits when the COBRA period ends.

For more information about continuation coverage rights under COBRA, please refer to the Plan's "Guide to Your Benefits." The guide is also available in PDF format on the SIU website, www.seafarers.org, under "Member Benefits-Seafarers Benefit Plans-Seafarers Health and Benefits Plan." If you have questions regarding this notice or COBRA, contact the Plan at (800) 252-4674.

Know Your Rights

FINANCIAL REPORTS. The Constitution of the SIU Atlantic, Gulf, Lakes and Inland Waters District/NMU makes specific provision for safeguarding the membership's money and union finances. The constitution requires a detailed audit by certified public accountants every year, which is to be submitted to the membership by the secretary-treasurer. A yearly finance committee of rank-and-file members, elected by the membership, each year examines the finances of the union and reports fully their findings and recommendations. Members of this committee may make dissenting reports, specific recommendations and separate findings.

TRUST FUNDS. All trust funds of the SIU Atlantic, Gulf, Lakes and Inland Waters are administered in accordance with the provisions of various trust fund agreements. All these agreements specify that the trustees in charge of these funds shall equally consist of union and management representatives and their alternates. All expenditures and disbursements of trust funds are made only upon approval by a majority of the trustees. All trust fund financial records are available at the headquarters of the various trust funds.

SHIPPING RIGHTS. A member's shipping rights and seniority are protected exclusively by contracts between the union and the employers. Members should get to know their shipping rights. Copies of these contracts are posted and available in all union halls. If members believe there have been violations of their shipping or seniority rights as contained in the contracts between the union and the employers, they should notify the Seafarers Appeals Board by certified mail, return receipt requested.

The proper address for this is:

Augustin Tellez, Chairman
Seafarers Appeals Board
5201 Auth Way
Camp Springs, MD 20746

Full copies of contracts as referred to are available to members at all times, either by writing directly to the union or to the Seafarers Appeals Board.

CONTRACTS. Copies of all SIU contracts are available in all SIU halls. These contracts specify the wages and conditions under which an SIU member works and lives aboard a ship or boat. Members should know their contract rights, as well as their obligations, such as filing for overtime (OT) on the proper sheets and in the proper manner. If, at any time, a member believes that an SIU patrolman or other union official fails to protect their contractual rights properly, he or she should contact the nearest SIU port agent.

EDITORIAL POLICY — THE SEAFARERS LOG. The Seafarers LOG traditionally has refrained from publishing any article serving the political purposes of any individual in the union, officer or member. It also has refrained from publishing articles deemed harmful to the union or its collective membership. This established policy has been reaffirmed by membership action at the September 1960 meetings in all constitutional ports. The responsibility for Seafarers LOG policy is vested in an editorial board which consists of the executive board of the union. The executive board may delegate, from among its ranks, one individual to carry out this responsibility.

PAYMENT OF MONIES. No monies are to be paid to anyone in any official capacity in the SIU unless an official union receipt is given for same. Under no circumstances should any member pay any money for any reason unless he is given such receipt. In the event anyone attempts to require any such payment be made without supplying a receipt, or if a member is required to make a payment and is given an official receipt, but feels that he or she should not have been required to make such payment, this should immediately be reported to union headquarters.

CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS. Copies of the SIU Constitution are available in all union halls. All members should obtain copies of this constitution so as to familiarize themselves with its contents. Any time a member feels any other member or officer is attempting to deprive him or her of any constitutional right or obligation by any methods, such as dealing with charges, trials, etc., as well as all other details, the member so affected should immediately notify headquarters.

EQUAL RIGHTS. All members are guaranteed equal rights in employment and as members of the SIU. These rights are clearly set forth in the SIU Constitution and in the contracts which the union has negotiated with the employers. Consequently, no member may be discriminated against because of race, creed, color, sex, national or geographic origin.

If any member feels that he or she is denied the equal rights to which he or she is entitled, the member should notify union headquarters.

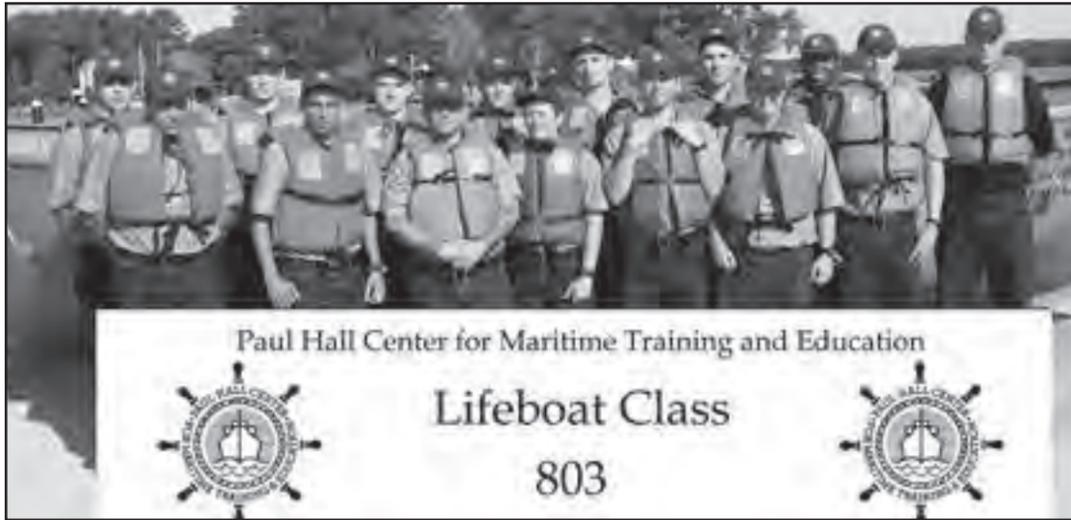

SEAFARERS POLITICAL ACTIVITY DONATION — SPAD.

SPAD is a separate segregated fund. Its proceeds are used to further its objects and purposes including, but not limited to, furthering the political, social and economic interests of maritime workers, the preservation and furthering of the American merchant marine with improved employment opportunities for seamen and boatmen and the advancement of trade union concepts. In connection with such objects, SPAD supports and contributes to political candidates for elective office. All contributions are voluntary. No contribution may be solicited or received because of force, job discrimination, financial reprisal, or threat of such conduct, or as a condition of membership in the union or of employment. If a contribution is made by reason of the above improper conduct, the member should notify the Seafarers International Union or SPAD by certified mail within 30 days of the contribution for investigation and appropriate action and refund, if involuntary. A member should support SPAD to protect and further his or her economic, political and social interests, and American trade union concepts.

NOTIFYING THE UNION. If at any time a member feels that any of the above rights have been violated, or that he or she has been denied the constitutional right of access to union records or information, the member should immediately notify SIU President Michael Sacco at headquarters by certified mail, return receipt requested. The address is:
